

Free Workshop for Families

Positive Behavioral Supports using a Collaborative Problem Solving Approach

Two Locations:

March 6, 2010 at the Ramada Inn - Bangor, ME
March 27, 2010 at Marshwood H.S. - South Berwick, ME

Program Description:

Do you have a child with challenging behaviors? This workshop, geared specifically towards parents, will review Lost at School, the new book from Dr. Ross Greene. It will be taught in an interactive forum facilitated by Jean S. Rosborough M.Ed. Through the use of Collaborative Problem Solving, parents and educators can create common understanding of challenging behaviors while at the same time work towards best solutions to support their child/student within home and school environments.

Who should attend: This workshop is designed with parents in mind, but is also beneficial to educators, and other professionals that work with children with challenging behaviors.

Participants will receive:

- The book Lost at School by Dr. Ross Greene
- Continental Breakfast and Lunch

About the Presenter: Jean S. Rosborough is a Special Education Consultant who works with students with challenging behaviors within public and special interest schools. Jean has her masters in Special Education from the University of Maine Orono with a dual emphasis in Significant Disabilities and Transition. Jean is a mother of three, one of whom has a significant learning disability and Attention Deficit Disorder. She has had to advocate for her child's needs within her local school district.
